

Cara Jade Myers (Wichita)

Cara Jade Myers is a Native American actor and writer who is an enrolled member of the Wichita tribe. In 2019, she was cast in an episode of the Emmy-Award winning series, "This is Us". Most recently, she was cast in Martin Scorsese's upcoming film, Killers of the Flower Moon, shooting on the Osage reservation in Oklahoma. She was accepted into the 4th Annual Native American TV Writers Lab and a semi-finalist in the ABC/Disney writers' program. In early 2020, Cara was among 12 selected as part of A3 Artist Agency's The Colony program, creating a TV pilot that is now in pre-production. She finished the year as a fellow of the Native American Feature Film Writers' Lab. Cara is actively involved in the Native American Media Alliance and dedicated to helping the Native American community overall. She enjoys helping others and while in acting class in LA, created CRASH Cares whose main focus is to create care packages for the homeless in Hollywood.